IOTA ADVISORS' UPDATE

It has been a great fall at IOTA. The chapter initiated 22 new brothers thanks to the leadership of Jack Moser and Michael Kuras our Recruitment Directors. IOTA has just over 75 brothers.

We hope to have at least ten more men join our ranks during winter and spring quarters.

The chapter President Aidan Vaughey and his leadership team has provided lots of programming for our brothers including community service events, athletic events, brotherhood events, educational programming and much more.

The 100th Chartering Celebration was a huge success. My thanks to Gary Berz and Don Reisfeld along with the rest of the reunion committee.

We would like to thank Kyle Leigh, Matt Meyer and Alec Hurst for taking a more active role as alumni advisors and house corporation directors. Gary Berz and I greatly appreciate their efforts as we transition to a younger advisory team.

We greatly appreciated the support of the ZBT staff to IOTA chapter.

We look forward to welcoming a new leadership team early next year and having them lead IOTA in becoming an even better brotherhood. As always, our thanks to Greg Grauberger, our Faculty Advisor and to Don Reisfeld, our editor and publisher of this newsletter.

We would greatly appreciate your efforts in helping us find our LOST alumni - please see page 36 and 37 and send us any updated information you might have on these brothers.

Happy Holidays!

Ron Grahame

Ron Grahame was sitting four rows behind us at the DU hockey game and I had the pleasure to chat with Ron between the second and third periods. I told him I was just a freshman back in 1972 (Ron's senior year at DU) and was fortunate to get student season hockey tickets. The seats were in the next to last row directly behind the goalie. The goalie was Ron Grahame. In April of 1973, DU went to the NCAA Championship series (Frozen Four) in Boston. It was during spring break and I drove with Bobby Susser from New Jersey to Boston. We stayed with Richie Nadler, a fraternity brother who lived in Needham, a suburb of Boston and went all the way to the Boston Garden to watch DU play Boston College in the semi-game. We won the first game 10-4 and were in the finals. In the NCAA championship game, Rob Palmer, our #1 center on DU's highest scoring line with Pete McNab and Rich 'Sarge' Preston was injured. Ron Grahame kept us in the game but we lost 3-2 to Wisconsin.

After a collegiate career with the University of Denver during which Ron Grahame was named a First Team All-American, Grahame was signed by the Houston Aeros of the WHA. He played a season for the minor league Macon Whoopies in 1973 before coming up to the Aeros at the end of the season. In the 1974-75 season he made the Aeros for good, leading the WHA in wins, shutouts and goals against average and backstopping the club to the AVCO World Trophy, winning both the Ben Hatskin Trophy for best goaltender, First Team All-Star accolades and the WHA Playoff MVP. His following two seasons saw an equal degree of success, including a Second Team All-Star berth in 1976 and a second Hatskin award in 1977.

He became a free agent after the 1977 season and signed with the NHL's Boston Bruins for the 1977-78 NHL season. He continued his starring play, having a fine season as the Bruins' number one goaltender. After that season, however, he was traded to the Los Angeles Kings for a first-round draft pick in the 1979 draft (which turned into Ray Bourque), and played poorly thereafter. He served with the Kings for three seasons before being sold to the Quebec Nordiques in December, 1980. He played eight games for the Nordiques before being sent down to the minors for the remainder of the season, after which he retired

POST-PLAYING CAREER

After retiring, Ron Grahame worked as the athletic director at the University of Denver, where he worked with the hockey team. He also conducted goalie clinics for ice hockey and inline hockey goaltenders

In 2007 Grahame began his second year as Senior Associate Athletics Director, and his 14th year as an administrator at the University of Denver. He was responsible for the overall supervision of all 17 varsity sport programs at Denver.

Grahame graduated from the University of Denver in 1973 with a B.A. in physical education and was one of the most successful hockey players in school history. After retiring from playing, he returned to Denver as an assistant coach from 1982 to 1989.

Ron and his wife Charlotte have two sons, John, an NHL goaltender who won the Stanley Cup in 2004 with the Tampa Bay Lightning, and Jason, who graduated from the University of Denver in 2003 and now lives in Vancouver. Ron and Charlotte reside in Denver. Charlotte and John are the only mother/son combination to have their names engraved on the Stanley Cup (Charlotte was a member of the Colorado Avalanche executive management during their 2001 Stanley Cup season).

Friday Night Dessert Reception at Chapter House

Aidan Vaughey, IOTA Chapter President gave a hearty welcome to the alumni and guests. Aidan then introduced Steve Ehrlich who briefly outlined Saturday's events which included a DU campus tour, an alumni vs undergrad touch football game and hiking in the foothills led by Gary Berz. Christopher Miosky, Associate Director, Fraternity and Sorority Life Advisor gave an informative overview of Greek Life at DU. Ned Porges, '62 reflected on our Chapter house. Ned was there back in 1959. Iota's eldest alumnus Joe Szyliowicz, '53 was introduced to the brotherhood.

"When I graduated from DU in 1953 our Fraternity brothers gave each graduating senior a great gift, this distinctive mug. And, I have always kept it on my desk as a reminder of my time in the Fraternity and the University of Denver."

Steve Ehrlich '70 thanks Don Reinfeld, '76 for producing the nostalgic video presentation, winning the Omega Cup (Best Publications) for 9 out of the past 10 years and his work on the reunion committee.

Steve, you are the ZBT and IOTA 'GOAT', the best of the best, as an educator and fraternity advisor. Fraternity is for a lifetime and may our friendship live forever. Congratulations and thank you for 56+ years of dedication and leadership.

Sweetheart Song led by Marc Lippitt, '71

The Fraternity's Song
Here's to our fraternity, May it live forever...

Peter McNab, longtime Avalanche broadcaster and former DU star, dies at 70: "Father of Colorado hockey"

McNab had a 14-year NHL career and went on to call Avs games for 25 years after the team's move to Colorado.

Peter McNab carried a notebook. He scribbled his observations during Avalanche games while providing color commentary for the live broadcast. He researched his own statistics and jotted them in the notebook before games. Altitude TV has people who find stats to prep the on-air talent. But McNab kept his findings a secret.

"It was sort of his bible," said Nuggets broadcaster Vic Lombardi, who sometimes anchors Avalanche coverage from the studio. "We all got information: 'Here's what to look for tonight. Here are the trends.' But then we all knew, Peter's got his own stuff. He would tell us, 'Wait until you hear this tonight.' He would never share it until we were on the air. It was the coolest thing."

McNab, the Colorado Avalanche's longtime analyst for Altitude TV, has died, the team announced Sunday. He was 70.

Admired by colleagues for his encyclopedic knowledge and steady, reliable presence even in the face of cancer, McNab called Avalanche games for 26 years, spanning the franchise's entire existence in Denver. He was beloved by hockey fans in Colorado for the passionate and honest analysis he brought to broadcasts.

McNab, the Colorado Avalanche's longtime analyst for Altitude TV, has died, the team announced Sunday. He was 70.

Admired by colleagues for his encyclopedic knowledge and steady, reliable presence even in the face of cancer, McNab called Avalanche games for 26 years, spanning the franchise's entire existence in Denver. He was beloved by hockey fans in Colorado for the passionate and honest analysis he brought to broadcasts.

But McNab's own career blossomed in Denver. He was a standout forward for the University of Denver, where he landed on NHL radars and was drafted by the Buffalo Sabres in 1972. It was the start of a 14-year NHL career in which he scored 363 goals and tallied 813 points playing for the Sabres, Boston Bruins, Vancouver Canucks and New Jersey Devils, where his father was the general manager.

In three seasons at DU (1970-73), McNab compiled 170 career points, still ranking 10th in program history. He led the Pioneers to a national runner-up finish with 32 goals in his final college season.

"Peter was a great storyteller of the game and had an incredible ability to connect viewers and fans with not only what was happening on the ice but the history of the sport as well," DU coach David Carle said in a statement.

McNab's television career started in New Jersey, where he called Devils games for eight seasons. When the Quebec Nordiques relocated to Denver and became the Colorado Avalanche, he joined the booth.

His first year calling Avs games was a dream season. The city's new team won the 1996 Stanley Cup, led by stars such as Peter Forsberg, Patrick Roy and Joe Sakic, who is now the Avalanche's president of hockey operations.

"(McNab) was a staple in the local hockey community, going back to his years playing at the University of Denver to working nearly 30 years with the Avs," Sakic said in a statement. "But as good as a hockey man as he was, he will be most remembered for being a friend to so many."

Including the players, who McNab made an effort to know personally.

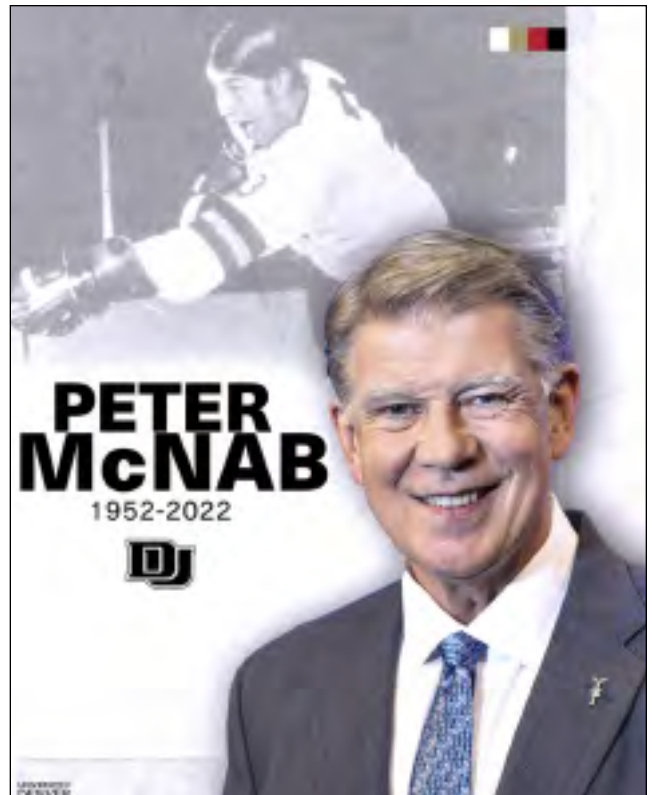

"He's a special guy. He would always come and sit beside me in my stall at the practice rink, and we would just talk about what was going on, talk about stuff in the league," former Avalanche forward Matt Duchene said. "I always enjoyed our talks. After his career, you could tell he still wanted to be part of hockey because he loved it so much. I've always really enjoyed meeting people like that."

Those relationships were evident in June after the Avs won their third Stanley Cup. As the team celebrated, McNab described the scene from the ice in Tampa. Lombardi and Altitude's live audience watched as Avalanche captain Gabriel Landeskog skated over and put his arm around McNab, ready to give an interview.

Like the broadcaster's first year in Colorado, his last full season also ended in a championship.

Associate Director
Fraternity & Sorority
Life Advisor

UNIVERSITY of DENVER

Hello from the University of Denver. My name is Christopher Miofsky and I serve as the Associate Director of Fraternity and Sorority Life (FSL). It is a pleasure to share a few updates with you. Since the beginning of the school year, we continue to work to bring our community back together after the height of the pandemic.

- We have begun a strategic planning process for our community to ensure that we can prove we are living up to our values. I thank Steve Ehrlich for serving on this committee as an alumni representative with extensive institutional knowledge. The plan will be made publicly available once it is finally approved.
- We have also continued to migrate processes online (roster updates, F.O.R.G.E. (formerly known as Accreditation), and others). We look forward to continuing to move more processes online to provide easier access to information for our members. We plan to pilot a council dues payment online beginning the winter quarter.
- We have been able to slightly increase staff capacity within FSL by sharing a Program Coordinator, Allie Tookmanian, with the Office of Student Engagement and two graduate students, Isabel Salvatore and Victoria Pereira who are working on several community wide initiatives related to brotherhood/sisterhood/siblinehood and health & safety.

I want to recognize the generosity of the chapter during its Centennial Celebration. It was wonderful to see so many alums and friends be present to support the chapter on this special occasion. I was humbled to be asked to say a few words during the reception after the hockey game and to be invited to the pre-game happy hour. I am thankful for our long partnership with Zeta Beta Tau and the support you all have given to our campus over our many years of partnership. I wish you all a safe and wonderful holiday season!

The Journey* ZBT – A FRATERNITY WITHOUT PLEDGING SINCE 1989

Zeta Beta Tau is proud to be the first fraternity that abolished pledging.

Zeta Beta Tau's brotherhood program is known as THE JOURNEY. This program focuses on the lifelong commitment that brothers make to ZBT and to each other. We believe brothers need to earn their membership every day.

All brothers have equal rights and equal responsibilities from day one of their membership.

A fraternity bond of 50-plus years: 'I never envisioned that this would go beyond graduation'

The American University ZBT brothers helped save one brother's business, chipped in to buy a car for another and created a scholarship for students in need.

The American University fraternity brothers, now in their 70s and 80s, returned to campus last weekend — their hair mostly gray, if they had any left at all. They each carried emotional battle scars from decades of life.

Of the original 200 Zeta Beta Tau members in the group, about 170 are still alive. They marveled at being back in the place they met when they were barely men.

The university's president, Sylvia M. Burwell, welcomed the group back to campus Oct. 15 and was struck by the gravity of the reunion.

"I am thrilled," Burwell said, holding back tears, "to see you all, and how you stay together."

The group, made up of men who graduated from American University between 1960 and 1972, have punctuated the longevity of their friendship with acts of giving. They helped save a brother's business that was going under, chipped in to buy a car for another member who was down on his luck, created a scholarship at the university for students in need and raised money for a school in Ecuador. They have also stood by one another through turmoil and triumphs.

"This group is special," Burwell said in an interview with The Washington Post. "ZBT helped set the culture of what these organizations should be. They are about community, and a group of people that support each other."

When it comes to Greek life, she continued, "I believe this is the example."

David Kanter, 80, founded the Beta Psi chapter of ZBT at American University in 1961 and was the fraternity's first president.

"I never envisioned that this would go beyond graduation into a group that would stick together and take care of each other," he said. "Fraternities are not all about exclusivity and drinking and partying. It can have a long-term meaning, and that is exactly what this has been."

Fraternity culture has been called into question in recent years on campuses across the country. Out-of-control hazing has turned fatal, incidents of sexual assaults and alleged druggings have mounted, and examples of racism, classism and other disturbing themes have come to the surface.

This group has tried to embody the inverse.

ZBT was founded in 1898, and despite being the world's first Jewish fraternity, the Beta Psi chapter welcomed people of all faiths and backgrounds. The chapter closed down and was later restored, and still operates at the school — though the current fraternity is not affiliated with the original members.

"I was the second African American in the group," said Chuck Hill, 76, who graduated in 1967. "I never felt alienated."

"The camaraderie that has developed over the years has been as strong as any that I've experienced in many of the military organizations that I've had the honor to serve in," said Hill, a retired Air Force pilot.

When one member's small bookstore in Lenox, Mass., was on the brink of bankruptcy, the fraternity — along with members of the local community — rallied to save it. The story became the subject of a documentary.

"When times come up that the group needs to support someone, there's no shying away," Hill said.

The brothers have also supported the community. Since 1998, they have maintained a scholarship fund and awarded a four-year partial scholarship to more than 20 university students based on financial need. Legacies of the fraternity are given priority, but the scholarship is also open to other students who meet their academic and financial requirements.

"All brothers contribute to whatever extent they can," said Howie Soltoff, a member of the fraternity who serves as a liaison with American University.

The group has funded educational programs elsewhere, too. When one brother, Harry Lehrer, died in 2004 at age 57, the brothers arranged an annual golf event in his memory. They have been raising funds for a school in Ecuador — where Lehrer's daughter worked as a teacher.

Additionally, the brothers have helped one another with serious personal matters over the years — including the loss of children and spouses, as well as health challenges, financial woes and legal issues.

"There have been many instances where I have helped and represented brothers and their family members confidentially, in matters of the most serious nature of one's life," said Ted Simon, 72, who graduated in 1971 and is a lawyer and former president of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers. "I'm sure I'm not alone."

The brothers are an unusual bunch, Simon said, in part because they are different from one another in many ways.

"This group, despite the vast political differences and divides, different social and cultural histories and experiences, significant age differences, and significant economic disparities, have remained a true band of brothers," Simon said. "I don't know people who have remained with a functioning group of this size for this long."

Simon created an email group 15 years ago that has helped keep the brothers in contact.

At the reunion, attendees reminisced and shared stories, including a classic tale in which Kanter chased a softball into Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson's front yard and was confronted by Secret Service officers. Johnson lived at the time in the Spring Valley neighborhood near the university.

David Aldridge, a former Washington Post writer and American University alumnus, presented Kanter with a softball that has Johnson's signature, as well as those of former AU president Hurst Anderson and Mickey Mantle, who was a famed New York Yankees player.

Participating in the reunion "was delightful," said Aldridge, who knows some of the fraternity brothers from the alumni community. When they asked if he would present the softball, "I was happy to do it."

"It's very touching that these guys are still together after all these decades," he added.

Following the campus event, the brothers spent the evening celebrating their friendship and dancing to The Van Dykes — a Baltimore rhythm and blues band that has played for the fraternity since the early 1960s.

Saturday's event was one of many gatherings the brothers have had since college, though the regular reunions didn't start until long after they left the university.

Ron Nissenbaum, 75, was one of the people who brought the group back together. It started in 1985, when Nissenbaum ran into a fraternity brother whom he had not seen since graduating in 1968.

As the two men caught up, Nissenbaum decided right then he would organize a reunion. That year, ZBT held its first one, which drew close to 200 people.

The gathering was such a hit, Nissenbaum said, that not long after, "I started getting calls from the guys saying we want to have another one."

And so they did — and so began a tradition of gathering on a regular basis and being in frequent communication.

As the men moved through life, they have remained one another's go-to guys for issues large or small.

"There are people that have had hard times financially, and there are brothers that have anonymously supported them," said Simon, adding that several brothers contribute additional funds toward reunions to ensure everyone is able to attend.

Simon said this group is juxtaposition to the stories of "fraternity hazing, death and sexual abuse."

The brothers hope their bond sets an example for what a fraternity can and should be like.

"Some things change; some things never do and never will," Simon said.

Alumnus Endows Professorship in Art

"In art, there are an infinite number of answers to any one question. It's not linear," says Everett Anton "Tony" Singer (BA Art '70). Painting was his initial focus upon arriving at the University of Denver, but his interests broadened during his time here. Through classes in interior design, sculpture, painting, and more, he soon discovered an array of artistic talents that prepared him for a dynamic career.

Singer is investing in similarly broad and meaningful educational experiences for future students through a legacy gift establishing the Everett Anton Singer Endowed Professorship in Art in DU's College of Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences.

"An endowed professorship provides the funding to attract extraordinarily talented faculty to DU," says Singer. "In addition to becoming a magnet that draws students to DU, this artist-educator will have a monumental impact as they influence the next generation of painters."

"The Everett Anton Singer Endowed Professorship will allow the School of Art and Art History to bring in a painting professor with international prominence, raising the visibility of the program and giving our student artists mentorship of the highest level," says Annabeth Headrick, PhD, director of the School of Art and Art History. "In our painting studios, where students create art side-by-side with their professors, it's a game-changer to think of aspiring painters sharing ideas and techniques with a professor of this stature."

Professors help students discover a world that is far bigger than they realized when they first came to DU. In teaching young artists, professors challenge students to learn about themselves, discover new talents, and apply their creativity to unexpected facets of life. Funding for an endowed professorship, as through Singer's gift, breathes life into that process.

"Tony's visionary leadership in establishing this professorship will bring highly gifted artists to DU to teach our students, creating a tremendous impact for the University for many years to come," says Val Otten, senior vice chancellor. "We celebrate the difference that his gift will make for this program, ensuring a lasting presence of talented painters who will teach our students."

After graduating from DU and attending graduate school, Singer channeled his creative passions toward his family's printing business. Together with his half-brother, Singer transformed the mom-and-pop social printing business into one of the top three color printers in the New York metropolitan area, winning more awards on a dollar volume basis than any of their competitors.

Key to Singer's success was his artistic ability to envision an elevated product for his customers and help them achieve it. Because his DU education had expanded his understanding of his own artistic gift, he was able to use his skills to transform the family business.

Alongside a lifelong passion for art is Singer's indisputable love of automobiles. In the early 1980s, Singer was one of two photographers in the world who changed the way that automobiles are photographed. Instead of the traditional front, rear, and side views, Singer's photography showcased the car's shapes and curves: the beauty and functionality of a Ferrari's details that no one had captured before. His resulting book was the first to display such details using the 5-color printing process, a necessity in accurately portraying the Ferrari's signature blood red paint.

Since the 1980s, Singer's artistry in photography, painting, and printing has joined forces with his passion for automobiles in his company, <https://www.VintageAutoPosters.com>. He buys and sells vintage automotive posters worldwide, employing his artistic skill and knowledge of the field to connect people with pieces that bring them joy.

"Creativity is not one-dimensional," says Singer. "That's part of what I learned at DU. If you have talent and a creative eye, that will come out in many facets of your life and artistic pursuits."

For the KIDS | Get On The Ball Give to Children's Miracle Network

Dear Family Members and Alumni,

We are currently working on our annual fundraising initiative called Get On The Ball. For those who are not familiar, Get on the Ball is a campaign to raise money for the Children's Miracle Network of Hospitals, something our fraternity holds dear.

The Children's Miracle Network's mission is to increase funds and awareness for Children's Hospital Colorado and other associated hospitals. These hospitals run solely on donations and community support because Medicaid and insurance programs sadly do not always fully cover the costs for care. Every day these hospitals treat children with trauma, diabetes, cancer, and surgeries. We have had fellow former brothers who have had children that were treated for one of these illnesses. Zeta Beta Tau has worked with the Children's Miracle Network for many years this is a cause that has always been an integral part of philanthropy. This year we have a goal of raising at least $10,000 for Get On The Ball. We encourage you to make a donation. No matter how big or small, your donation plays an integral role in saving the lives of children. Below is our link to the Get On The Ball web site. Thank you for your consideration and support for our cause.

The ZBT IOTA website is the product of a lot of hard work from very dedicated individuals. Through the help of a website developer, we were able to create something that we truly felt captured our chapter and who we are. Our new website features a variety of comprehensive tabs, each revealing something different regarding our brotherhood, along with a blog to keep followers in the loop with all things Iota. I encourage you to check it out for updates, current news and photos.

President

This fall term has proven to be a strong start to the school year for Iota. We have had all allowable programming and looking forward to doing more and continuing to strengthen the chapter on all fronts. We are looking forward to an even more robust schedule next quarter.

Special thanks to all who could join us in celebrating our 100th year anniversary of our charter. Cheers to another successful 100 years!

C, F & S,
Aidan Vaughey
IOTA Chapter President

Programming Director

My name is Beck Duncan, and I am the Programming Director for the Iota chapter. The programming director is responsible for helping to plan programming events for the brothers.

Specifically, events that tie in with community service/philanthropy and the journey, along with serving on the executive board.

This fall, we have a goal of getting each brother to 10 community service hours along with every brother raising one hundred dollars for our philanthropy partner, Children's Miracle Network. We have had multiple community service events, including a sock drive and volunteering for Denver parks and recreation. We are also well on our way to raising money for the Children's Miracle Network. For the rest of the year, we plan on making a run to win the Brummer cup. I am proud of what our chapter is doing and looking forward to contributing to our path to winning a Brummer cup!

Faculty Advisor

I am Greg Grauberger, the faculty advisor for ZBT, I work as an advisor at the Daniels College of Business and work closely with Daniels students and their families. My opportunity to serve for ZBT gives me the chance to branch out and enjoy the privilege of working with a group of brothers who are very visible and distinguished on campus. In the time I have been associated with ZBT, I have witnessed the energy and effort that the house places against all campus activities, creating well-rounded brothers who are creating meaningful, lifelong networks. As a priority, I want the current brothers to think back to the time that they joined ZBT, the commitment to stand shoulder to shoulder with their brothers, to respect and be there for them. Now, step back to re-examine that original commitment they made to themselves and to the others who are their ZBT family. Given that perspective, how can they personally extend and increase that commitment inside, and outside the ZBT community? What are some strategies and tactics to accomplish this academically, culturally, and socially? These will be some areas we explore in the future, and as parents and alums, your feedback is welcome.

I am very honored and flattered by the recognition, and to have been able to receive the Excellence, Chapter Faculty Adviser award in person. In my position in Daniels, I work with a lot of students, and a lot of Greek students, and each day I feel most fortunate to be connected specifically as a ZBT Brother with everyone individually, and as a group. It's a tremendous house, but one that has not even reached its potential academically, which is both a challenging and exciting proposition. While last night provides a snapshot for earned celebration, it also gives us the impetus to direct our momentum to the future and to visualize the accomplishments ahead of us.

Thanks again, and please give all the Brothers my sincere thanks at the upcoming chapter meeting.

Operations Director

Hi, my name is Liam Fitzgerald. I am a junior from Clarendon Hills and I have been serving as the Operations Director since February of this year. As Operations Director I have been able to work with different brothers to coordinate events such as brotherhood development, athletic events, study groups, and tailgates to support our brothers playing sports here at DU. We have had a great year as we continue to bring back our programming post COVID, and we can't continue the rest of the year!

C, F & S,
Liam Fitzgerald
Operations Director

Finance Director

Hello everyone, my name is Aiden Belt. I am the current Finance Director of ZBT Iota. I have enjoyed working closely with the chapter to get our money's worth this year! As we enjoy a schedule full of programming, we are supporting our brotherhood development, charitable events around campus, and enjoyed a full schedule of fall recruitment events. The chapter is looking forward to a semi-formal, winter retreat, and plenty of other programming this winter! We look forward to maintaining a sustainable budget so we may continue to reap the benefits of this brotherhood!

C, F & S,
Aiden Belt
Finance Director

Communications Director

Hi Brothers and Friends! My name is Nihal Padhy and I am from Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. I am the Communications Director of our ZBT Chapter here at the University of Denver. I am a sophomore majoring in Finance at the Daniels School of Business. Some of my duties as Communications Director are making summaries for our chapter meetings, making our weekly newsletter the Wednesday weekly, keeping track of all attendance, keeping up with our rosters, and sending a lot of emails. I look forward to helping the brothers move out and get set for winter quarter as well as have a good relaxing winter break ahead of a full packed and exciting winter quarter.

C, F & S,
Nihal Padhy
Communications Director

Risk Prevention & Wellness Director

Hello, my name is Braden Meese and I am from Norwalk, Connecticut. As we begin a year packed full of programming and events risk prevention is one of the top priorities for our chapter. This year I will continue to work with fellow brothers and appropriate 3rd parties to revise and fine-tune our risk prevention protocols. We are also looking forward to our risk management workshop later in the year and plan on having James R. Favor & Co. speak to the chapter in the winter on fraternity liability to further educate and enlighten our brothers on risk prevention.

C, F & S,
Braden Meese
Risk Prevention and Wellness Chairmen

Recruitment Directors

Hi, we are the recruitment directors for the Iota chapter. The recruitment of the Zeta Beta Tau Iota chapter has been thriving throughout the year. This year the entire Iota chapter has been helping recruit to continue to expand the chapter in the best way possible. Our duties as recruitment directors include planning recruitment events for fall, winter and spring rush. Our duties also include reaching out to the student body of the University of Denver, to recruit men that would respect and follow the credo and standards of the Iota chapter. We are super excited to continue and spread the values of the Iota chapter in Zeta Beta Tau:

jack.moser@du.edu and michael.kuras@du.edu.

C, F & S,
Jack Moser and Michael Kuras
Recruitment Chairmen

Community Service

My name is Kiran Powers and I am serving as the Community Service chairman for ZBT Iota. This quarter I have planned, organized, and executed community service events for our brothers with Denver Parks & Recreation. I look forward to continuing and expanding on my projects and creating quality service events for my brothers next quarter!

C, F & S,
Kiran Powers
Community Service Chairmen

Heritage

Hello, I am Tyler Hums and I serve as the Heritage chair of the ZBT Iota chapter. My goal this quarter has been to promote the education of our chapter's heritage and culture. I've attended webinars to increase my education on inclusion of the Jewish culture. Later this month Rabbi Yossi, from the Denver University Chabad, will be attending a chapter meeting to educate the brothers on the stereotypes of the Jewish culture, along with enlightening the chapter on the importance of our chapter's Jewish heritage. As the year goes on we will plan to hold some remembrance events with the chapter and continue to strengthen our relationship with the DU Chabad on campus.

C, F & S,
Tyler Hums
Heritage Chairmen

Alumni/Parental Relations

Our names are David Cope and Gideon Kroutil. We serve as Alumni/Parental Relations chairmen for ZBT Iota. This quarter, we have placed a significant emphasis on building relationships with alumni, new and old. We were proud to host ZBT Iota's Centennial Celebration with over 100 alumni and guests in attendance, and parents' weekend for DU Homecoming.

We look forward to offering more opportunities for undergraduates and alumni to bond, no matter the age difference or existing social boundaries.

C, F & S,
David Cope & Gideon Kroutil
Alumni/Parental Relations Chairmen

Philanthropy/ B Positive

My name is Braden Krumholz and I am the new philanthropy chair. Philanthropy is an important part of our fraternity and right now, we have a goal of $100 per member for Get on the Ball. Along with Get on the Ball; which supports Children's Miracle Hospitals, we are supporting the Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity along with the Women International. We ultimately have a goal of raising $10,000 by the end of the school year.

Of counsel with my law firm, but my full time job is Chief Legal Officer for CFSC, a client. Hanging with my wife, kids, and grandchildren in Denver and Chicago. Skiing with family and friends whenever possible. Guys, I went to DU in the late 1960s. Who remembers what happened then? Ski weekends and vacations with my fraternity brothers and outrageous times in Aspen and Vail.

Married to Leigh, we have one granddaughter and two daughters: Lillian (Nurse/Certified Midwife) and Sarah (People Ops, HR) professional) they both live in Boston. No longer receiving W-2 income so I am a high priced community volunteer. My best fraternity memories... in no particular order: dance marathon's, spring weekends, bar parties, bottle rocket wars, food fights, getting high.

email: msiegelfla@gmail.com

Robert Peters '76

I am partially retired, consulting with prior firm, serving on charitable board in Naples, Florida and leading an active life swimming, golfing, playing tennis, biking and skiing. There were so many great memories, many of which I cannot put down in writing, although the statute of limitation has probably run out by now. I recall the masquerade, toga, and Hawaiian Lua parties.

Still working in the advertising agency business in my man cave. Taking care of my 99 year old Dad.

Volunteer/graphic design work for my temple and IOTA. Traveling, annual fishing and skiing trips with the Boyz. But the best is skiing, ice skating and spending time with my grandkids Drew (8) and Carly (6).

I enjoy travelling while working on my commercial real estate practice. Visiting my daughter, son-in-law and grand daughter in Atlanta with my wife Barbara. I have fond memories of hockey games, Thursday bar parties and casino nights. MTR's, road trips for spring formals and birthday cake float with the Animal House theme.

Married to my wife Lisa, we have two daughters: Rachael (31) and Jessica (29). I am practicing law and selling legal technology for process serving. My best fraternity memory is the human backgammon fund raiser we did when we painted the basketball court as a backgammon board. Billy Castellano and I played games on the roof and directed brothers and little sisters as the game pieces on the ground. Only so much I will put in writing!

John "Jack" Golbert 1940-2020 PHI SIGMA DELTA, Iota '62

A few days ago, I received a note from Nate Davidovich, '60, in Jerusalem. Am so saddened to learn of Jack Golbert's, '62, passing. Nate and Jack lived in the same Jerusalem community. I just heard from Jack a few weeks ago. Of course, there was no mention of his heart issues. As college men, we shared many adventures: being the first to move into the new chapter house, fraternity roommates, driving across the country for summer jobs at Bobbie Parker's Concord Hotel in the "Borscht Belt," having beers with him at his New York apartment. Jack lived with his family in Aurora, Colorado. After graduation from University of Denver, he moved to New York City to attend law school at NYU. Several years later, he moved to Los Angeles and eventually back to his home town, Denver. Jack moved to Israel in 1980, married and had a family. He had a law practice in Colorado and Jerusalem. Jack became a modern-orthodox Jew, was a prolific writer, a political activist and had a subtle sense of humor. I have attached a picture from 1964 of Jack. He and his mother hosted my grandparents for a day at the Colorado Springs Air Force Academy. My grandparents took several auto trips from their New Jersey home to visit relatives in California. One year they stopped in Denver and the Golberts invited them for a day of sight-seeing. I fondly knew the Golberts, his sister, his parents, his brothers and to this day, so admired Jack for his humor, intelligence, and his cultural devotion.

A couple years ago, my wife Phyllis and I traveled to Israel. We spent a wonderful day with the Davidovich and Golbert families. We had pizza, reminisced over the good times at the Iota Chapter house. (Our wives didn't get it.) Jack was so proud of his daughter serving in the Israeli military. He died at age 80, peacefully in his sleep, on Shabbat, as if he planned it that way. Thanks, Nate, for sharing this sad news. My condolences to Jack's brother, wife and children. Jack Golbert leaves a positive footprint on this world. We will miss him.

Delayed Adventures Due to Virus

For the past numerous years, the "Iota Elders" have gathered together. There were reunions in Phoenix, Miami, Denver. Many of the guys, now in their 70s and 80s, have experienced great times with each other. Several of the "Elders" have passed on, but their memories remain.

Over the last few years Harvey Volin, '60, Ned Porges, '62, Alan Witheiler, '62, Barry Close, '63, Jack Greenbaum, '63 shared memorable adventures together. But, sorry to say, the dreaded coronavirus plaguing the world has delayed some of these scheduled escapades.

For instance, Greenbaum of San Francisco and Porges in Seattle planned to have a less ordinary travel experience. They had reservations for a March overnight, first class Amtrak trip from Seattle to San Jose. Sleeper cabin, white table cloth, complimentary wine...a top-notch experience for two travel enthusiasts. Amtrak, sadly, cancelled this trip. It is on hold for now.

Then, another disappointment. Witheiler suggested and planned almost a year ago, a June white-water rafting trip. He would fly from Dallas, then he and Porges would drive to Idaho for a week river rafting camping adventure on the famed Snake River. Sadly, that too was cancelled by the tour company.

These excursions are still on the bucket-list. So are a few more such as hot-air balloon rides at the annual New Mexico festival. Maybe another week cruise in the San Juan Islands aboard the M.Y. Challah Day. If any of the proud Iota Elders have a desire to discover, to explore, to experience, please give a shout-out. We ain't getting younger. Count me in!

Edward (Ned) Porges, Ed.D. – Seattle, Washington
